Elms College

The College of Our Lady of the Elms, founded in 1928 by the Sisters of St. Joseph, is a Catholic, liberal arts, coeducational college. The college affirms its original, comprehensive goal of combining education for life with education for a career. Founded to educate women and aware of the importance of this tradition, the college now opens all its programs and services to both men and women.

Irish Cultural Center at Elms College

The Irish Cultural Center was the work of Elms former President Kathleen Keating, SSJ, Elms Professor Emeritus Thomas F. Moriarty and Sean Cahillane whose mother was born on the Blasket Island.

The largest number of immigrants to the United States from the Blaskets, famous for their spoken Irish and story telling, settled in Western Massachusetts and Northern Connecticut. Many of them attended a showing in 1997 of Breandán Féiritear's "Blasket Roots, American Dreams" at Elms College.

The Irish Cultural Center at Elms College officially opened in 1999. Since then, its events have ranged from the social to the spiritual to the educational. The Center celebrated its 10th anniversary October 1999 with a weekend of events.
